CROTHERSVILLE

Its Founding And Growth as Told by Early Residents.

The town of Crothersville has an interesting history. Its pioneers passed through many of the thrilling experiences of the early settlers, and it was their trials and hardships that made possible the Crothersville of today. Among these hardy pioneers is Elisha Bess who probably knows as much about the early history of Crothersville as any person in Vernon Township.

About fifty-five years ago Mr. Bess was employed by John Hamacher to assist in building a log house upon his farm, which afterwards proved to be the first house ever built in Crothersville. This house, although recently remodeled, is still standing on Main street. Soon after this house was erected, the owner was urged by Thomas Baker and Henry Williams, who lived near Jersey, then a thriving town, to have part of his farm surveyed and laid out in lots. This was done and the town thus platted was named Haysville, because the country in that vicinity was thought to be an ideal place for the growing of hay. Soon afterwards, however the name was changed to Crothersville upon the promise of Mr. Crothers of the J. M. & I. railroad, to erect a station at that point.

While the railroad was constructed about the time the town was laid out, affording an excellent means of travel to the south, and a little later to the north, the early pioneers found it very difficult to travel from place to place. They were at a disadvantage in not having mill facilities near their homes, and it was necessary, in order to get their grain ground that it be placed in sacks, and taken on horse back to Madison thirty miles distant. To this village there was only a narrow path or trail through the woods, as no roads had yet been built. There were no stores in the vicinity and the settlers had to go to either Jeffersonville about forty miles away, or to Madison for their supplies and provisions.

Daniel Baringer, who has lived in Vernon township for seventy years, his parents having moved there when he was but one year old, says that there were hardly forty acres of land cleared in that township in 1848. The entire country was covered with a dense woods of white oak, poplar, hickory, gum and maple. It was then a frequent occurrence for the woodsmen to cut down the largest trees, form several rafts, and float down the Muscatuck to the Wabash and hence to New Orleans.

The forests were alive with wild animals, and the farmers never went to work without their ever trusty rifle. A few of the oldest residents of Crothersville have killed bears in Vernon township, and practically all the early settlers have hunted deer, wolves, wild turkeys and panthers upon the very ground where the business houses of Crothersville are now built. James Pearson, one of the oldest residents, has seen the unusual sight of thirty deer feeding together where the town now stands.

At one time there seemed to be some doubt as to whether Crothersville would ever become a town. Land owners near Jersey, a small town south of Crothersville, endeavored to influence the railroad officials to give Jersey all the railroad accommodations, and thus lessen the chances of a new town being built. The railroad, however refused to give any preference and were rather inclined to assist in any way they could the founding of new villages. At the present time there is scarcely anything which would mark a town at Jersey, while Crothersville has always grown and prospered.

The residents of Vernon township have always tried to give their children the best available school and advantages, and as early as 1848 a small school building was erected in the forests. Since that time an excellent educational system has been founded, and the school children of that township receive the advantages of those of larger cities. Modern school buildings have been erected and an able corps of teachers is employed.

Crothersville has always been an enterprising town. It has a large stove mill, at one time the largest in the state. This mill turns out over three million staves and two and one half million sets of heading annually. It employs about forty people and has several branch mills outside the township. The plant usually runs through-out the year and is a valuable addition to the business interests of Crothersville. The canning factories located there have been very successful and the two canneries, the Crothersville Canning Co. and the Farmers' Canning Co. put out about four million five hundred thousand cans of tomatoes, hominy, beans, kraut and pumpkin. The business and professional men of Crothersville are representatives of that aggressiveness, which has characterized so prominently the successful enterprises of the present day, and are ever watchful for any improvement which will better their town.

Ban On Foot Ball.

Word comes from Vincennes that the high school faculty has placed the ban on foot ball in the high school there this year. It is said if the Old Post town is represented in athletics this fall, the pupils will have to act independently of the school and do so without the high school colors.

The cause of the high school faculty shutting down on the team is not explained, but it is probably due to the fact that some of the players last year failed to make the proper credits and that the faculty decided that the game was interfering with school work.

Another Cargo Landed.

100 bushels of extra fine large juicy pears for canning and preserving. $1.00 per bushel.

COLE'S SMOKE HOUSE.

Afternoon Reception.

Yesterday afternoon, between the hours of four and six, Miss Gladys Kyte, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Kyte, of north Walnut street, entertained in honor of her house guest, Miss Dorothy Cunningham, of Martinsville. Every nook and corner displayed large banks of golden rod, while the dining room was decorated in maiden hair ferns and fall roses. Dainty refreshments were served, Miss Myra Laupus and Miss Harriet Montgomery presiding at the punch bowl; Miss Margaret Remy, Miss Katherine Hancock and Miss Ada Cordes in the dining room. Miss Cunningham expects to visit several days before her return to Martinsville.

Birthday Party.

Roy Newby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Newby, celebrated his tenth birthday this afternoon by entertaining twelve of his companions from two to five o'clock. They engaged in various games and spent a very enjoyable afternoon. Mrs. Newby served refreshments and helped to make the stay of the boys very pleasant.

Tin Shower.

Miss Addie Gasaway gave a tin shower Friday evening in honor of Miss Delight Hopewell who is to be married in the near future. Quite a number of Miss Hopewell's friends were present and had a very enjoyable evening. During the evening some excellent music selections were rendered which were highly appreciated.

Pythian Sisters.

DIED.

O'MARA—Mrs. Johanna O'Mara, of Brownstown, died Saturday morning about eight o'clock of Angina Pectoris. Mrs. O'Mara was a widow lady living by herself, and was in apparently good health Friday evening. Early Saturday morning she called Dr. Wilson, who upon visitation found her suffering with pains in her breast and about her heart. After completing his examination he started for his office to prepare the medicine needed, but hardly had he arrived before word came that the patient was thought to be dead. He hurried to her home, but found that she had died a few minutes before. Mrs. O'Mara was 76 years old and has five living children, John of Oklahoma, Patrick of Fairmouth, Ind., Michael of St. Louis, Daniel of Montana, and one daughter Mary, who has not been heard from for several years. Besides the children there are several married grand children.

Arrangements for the funeral will not be made until the arrival of some of the children which will probably be several days.

HOADLEY—J. C. Hoadley, a veteran of the civil war, and a brother of W. E. Hoadley, of this city, died about five o'clock Friday afternoon at his home in Newport, Ky., after an extended illness. Age about 65 years. He was a member of the Fourteenth Illinois United States cavalry and served all during the rebellion. He was also a member of the William Nelson Post, G. A. R. of Newport, which organization will have charge of the funeral Monday. A widow, one brother, five sisters and three grand children survive him. W. E. Hoadley was at Newport only recently to make his brother a short visit and he was in very poor health at that time from stomach and bowel trouble. About 4:35 Friday afternoon he received a message that his brother was dying. Mr. Hoadley will go to Newport to attend the funeral.

Masons Keep Busy.

At the special meeting of Jackson Lodge, No. 146, F. & A. M., Thursday evening the second degree was conferred and a new feature of the work was the singing by the quartette composed of Prof. J. C. Edwards, Ed Bryan, E. L. Hancock and Dr. L. M. Mains, jr. The second degree will probably be conferred on another candidate next Monday evening. Arrangements are being made for another special meeting, probably the last of next week, to confer the third degree. Announcement of this will be made when arrangements are complete. There will be some social features provided. This has been a good year for Jackson Lodge and quite a number of new members have been added. In fact this lodge has scarcely been without work for two or three years. Masons who have not been in the habit of attending should make it a point to get out to the regular meeting next Monday night.

Whitecap Trial.

The Monroe county men charged with whitecapping Thomas Vanest near Columbus are to be tried again at Columbus. The date set is October 15, and the witnesses are now being summoned.

Judge Miers was at Columbus Thursday representing the defense arranging for the trial, and was assured by the court officers that there would be no postponement. It is remembered that Jacob Kirk and David Fox, who live near Smithville, were found guilty, but were given a new trial because of a legal error in the proceedings.

New Time Card.

A new time card goes into effect on the Southern Indiana tomorrow morning with four changes as follows:

No. 1 arrives at 10:07 a. m.
No. 3 arrives at 3:35 p. m.
No. 2 departs at 9:45 a. m.
No. 9 departs at 5:30 p. m.
The time of all other trains remains the same.

Circuit court will convene again next Monday after an adjournment of three days. The grand jury has been in session all week.

AMBULANCE

Frank Voss Buys One That is Up-to-Date.

Nothing is too good for Seymour. No one believes this anymore heartily than does Frank J. Voss, the S. Chestnut street furniture dealer and undertaker. Mr. Voss has just purchased a fine private ambulance which is as useful and convenient as it is beautiful. It is just the thing that is needed in connection with the city hospital and with the new hospital which will probably be built before the end of next year. This ambulance is about as well equipped as any you will find in the larger cities. There is every faculty for the ease and comfort of the patient, including swinging and folding chairs, etc. This will be a very useful vehicle to those who have occasion to use the same. A patient will be made about as comfortable as it is possible with the ambulance going at any speed.

Mr. Voss is ready to serve the public and will answer calls on short notice at any time day or night. The ambulance is built like a government ambulance and was made by a firm which makes a specialty of that kind of work. In case of railway or other accidents where quick transportation is important the ambulance can be driven at any reasonable speed with comfort and safety. Mr. Voss is to be congratulated on taking this forward step and supplying a vehicle at considerable expense that will be so valuable to the people. If he will go ahead now and get the people together who want a city hospital, he will do a further public service.

We believe that there are plenty of people in Seymour who want to do their part to build and equip a modern hospital such as we need. Laboring men and others who began to save and lay in store early spring so as to be prepared to make as liberal a contribution as possible when called upon to help out have now spent all that money and have made and spent many times that much more. Many people who will give $5 under ordinary circumstances will give $25 when they know that everybody else is taking interest in the promotion of the hospital in the same proportion. A $5,000 contribution or possibly a $2,500 contribution added to the $10,000 contribution of Mrs. Louis Schneck which was announced a few months ago, would give a new impetus to the work of securing contributions which would carry it through to a successful ending before many weeks. There ought to be some more $1,000 subscriptions yet and several more of $500. If we would put the same energy into the work of raising this fund that we do in looking after our own business or in getting up a fourth of July celebration or other attraction, all of which are well and good, we would soon have the job completed and out of the way ready for work to begin and would all feel the better for it and could go right on saving money for some other progressive move.

$30.00 in prizes for the persons guessing nearest to the number of bars of soap in the window.

Class Entertained.

Mrs. Jay C. Smith entertained her Sunday school class Friday evening from four to six at her home on north Chestnut street. Besides some out door games, the boys spent part of the time drawing outlines representing each of the Sunday school lessons of the quarter. Refreshments were served. The class had a very enjoyable afternoon.

Peruna Tablets Tested.

What are the Peruna Tablets good for? Has anybody used them enough to know what they will do? Read the following letter and see. If you have any doubt as to the genuineness of the letter, write to Mrs. Lohr, enclose a stamp for reply, and see whether her testimonial is genuine or not:

Ravenna, Mich., June 16, 1908.

The Peruna Drug Co.

In regard to the Peruna Tablets, I have used about ten boxes in all.

While I was in Chicago my oldest daughter was bothered with a cough all the time. She has had it for four years. Sometimes it would go away, and in the winter time it was so bad that the doctors and professors said that she had consumption, and the only way to give her any relief was to perform an operation.

I spend so much money for different medicines, and for doctors also. Nothing seemed to help her.

So I saw the Peruna Tablets advertised in the paper, and I got a box and tried them. She could get some sleep by taking them. She would be up all night and cough. So in all she took six boxes, and never was bothered any more.

I will leave this for any one to inquire at our old residence, where we lived in Chicago. All our neighbors would say that she could not live with such a cough. You don't know how thankful I am. She is eighteen years old.

My oldest son also was bothered with his stomach, throwing up, and his bowels so loose all the time. He was all run down for four months. I also doctored with him. One would say this and the other something else. I started in to give him the Tablets, and now he is all right and healthy looking. He took four boxes. That is all he wants to take whenever anything ails him.

So I praise your Tablets just as high as I have your Peruna. That is all the medicine that ever comes in my house. Whenever I travel I take some with me. I have had three of my children sick with scarlet fever two months ago, and that is all I used, was the Peruna and the Tablets. I did not lose any of them.

If there is any more information you want, why just let me know and I will be glad to do so. Yours truly,

Mrs. L. LOHR, Ravenna, Mich.

School Notes.

The work of the special teachers began in earnest the past week. Prof. H. C. Gast again has charge of the music in the schools and his enthusiasm makes the pupils enthusiastic in their efforts. Chorus work and sight reading will be features of the music work.

Miss Lillian Volland, of Columbus, comes down each day to supervise the drawing in the schools. The Frang system is taught. Each pupil is now supplied with the needed materials and the work of art is moving along nicely.

Miss Elizabeth Reinhart begins her third year as Instructor in Penmanship in the schools. The semi-slant system is taught with fore-arm movement.

Instruction in penmanship is given every afternoon as Miss Reinhart has the History and Literature work in the 8th grade at the Shields building every morning.

One hundred bushels of fine juicy Fleenorcling peaches. Go at $1.50 to $1.75 per bushel.

COLE'S SMOKE HOUSE

Public Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Home Keeper's Association will be held in the Public Library Monday, Sept. 20th, at 3 p. m. The following program has been arranged for the afternoon:

"Home and Shop Sanitation," Mrs. Harley Jackson

"The House Fly," Mrs. Elmer Bollinger

"The Sanitary Condition of our Streets and Alleys," Mrs. C. D. Billings

These subjects will be discussed from their practical and sanitary standpoints. The meetings of this Association are open to all who care to attend and it is hoped that all ladies who are interested in a better sanitary condition of our city will be present at the meeting Monday afternoon.

CAVES FOUND IN LAVA BEDS.

Discoveries in Klamath Region a Source of Wonder to Tourists.

The Modoc lava beds in California, near the Klamath County line, long a place of historic as well as scenic interest, have grown more prominent lately from reason of new discoveries, especially as to the caves, of which there are a great many in this region. writes a correspondent for the Portland Oregonian, all among lava beds of the ruggedest description.

As one traverses Tulu Lake, the southern margin of which rests on the lava field, about forty extinct volcanoes can be counted in the region south of the lake. Many of these are weathered and ancient, covered with shrubs and trees, and others are absolutely bare and the reddish lava about their craters has a modern look.

Following the lava flows from these cinder cones are vast crevices and crinkled ridges of lava and caves of great extent and of various forms. A man who lives in this region, and who has passed thirty years as a cowboy, claims to have discovered a cave many miles in extent, which he calls the Mammoth Cave of California, and steps are being taken to make a thorough exploration of its vast subterranean recesses.

A party of thirteen persons from Klamath Falls has just returned from a four day's outing in the lava beds, and report a most interesting outing in that land of dead volcanoes.

Several new caves were discovered by the party, one of which was 200 feet in length, 50 in width and with a level ceiling 40 feet above the floor. The most important discovery made by the party, however, was of a two-story cave, which is indeed one of the world's marvels. A hole was found some ten feet in width in the bottom of a large cave. A lantern was lowered on a rope until it was evident that there was another floor with a surrounding cavity some twenty-five or thirty feet below. A small pine tree was cut, divested of its limbs and brought into the cave. This was lowered until it touched the lower floor, and by it the party descended to a great corridor, thirty or forty feet wide, extending apparently parallel with the corridor above in both directions from the point of descent. The corridor is not less than 500 feet in extent, and is obstructed at the ends by loose material fallen from above. No thermometer was at hand to determine the temperature, but it is cool enough to contrast greatly with the degree above ground, and icicles five or six feet in length depend from the ceiling in many places.

RUGGED HALE IS RUGLESS.

Maine Senator Simple in His Tastes and Abhors Innovations.

Spacious offices, high marble floors and big mahogany desks do not appeal to Senator Eugene Hale of Maine, and he is one of the few Senators who have not taken advantage of the opportunities offered by the new Senate office building, according to the New York Herald. Last vacation time Col. Dan M. Randall took a look at the rooms of the committee on naval affairs and was shocked at the condition of its floor coverings and the ancient character of its furniture. It was not in keeping with the position of one of the leaders of the United States Senate. A few days after a bundle of rug samples was delivered at Ellsworth, Me., where Senator Hale spends his summers. It was accompanied with a polite suggestion as to the rehabilitation of the Maine Senator's quarters in the capitol.

"When I want my committee room fixed up I will let you know," said the curt note which two days later was laid on the desk of the sergeant-at-arms. "Who told you that I wanted new carpets? That is my room and it is not to be disturbed." The rug samples were not even returned.

So it is that the room on the gallery floor of the Senate still shows the tiled floor through the worn carpet and sports only the old-fashioned plain oak furniture of fifty years ago. It even has a rocking chair of the kitchen fireside model of many years past. Senator Hale likes the room as it is, and so it stays. When he relinquished the chairmanship of the committee on naval affairs and took that of appropriations he retained this room. Much of his time is spent in it. Down in the rooms of the committee on appropriations they have telephones and other modern bothers which Senator Hale abhors. Never has there been a telephone in the committee room of naval affairs.

BUILT OVER CATACOMBS.

Subterranean Chambers Under Certain Districts of Paris.

Paris in many of its districts is built over the catacombs. These vast subterranean chambers and galleries produce that peculiar cavernous sound which is heard in the Luxembourg, Montparnasse, Vaugrard, Montrouge, and Montsouris quarters when heavy carts pass rapidly along the coarsely metalled roads. The streets are then like monstrous drums beating funeral marches to the graves over that vast common grave of two centuries of Parisians with its millions of skeleton dead.

The quaint little Gothic house at the corner of the recently prolonged Boulevard Raspail, which many an American artist must remember from his student days, actually has a private stairway leading to the catacombs from beneath a hermetically closed slab just in front of the doorstep. From time to time, says Harper's Weekly, certain municipal officials visit this grim entrance, the existence of which is known to only very few people.

A former occupant of the house, surprised by one of these visits, the reason of which was mysterious to him, was accustomed to relate that once in the dead of night he watched, quaking, from the room above, convinced that he was witnessing the final scene in a tragedy in some Borgialike political tragedy, a party of men, the chief of whom were half concealed under his coat the tricolor scarf of a police commissary, had conveyed a body through this entrance into the catacombs below.

FRICK'S SUMMER MANSION.

It's the Limit for "Summer Cottage" Magnificence.

"Probably the limit of magnificence in the way of summer residences," along the north shores of Massachusetts Bay has been reached by that of Henry C. Frick, in the opinion of a descriptive writer for the Springfield Republican. It is in that part of Beverly known as Pride's Crossing, and built on a tremendous foundation of stone masonry, it overlooks the ocean for miles and commands a view of an undulating tree and grass-grown country from Salem to Gloucester. The building is of red brick and has a red roof and can thus, from its commanding position, be seen from a great distance. The establishment is on a scale so magnificent that a special electric light plant, owned by Mr. Frick, has been installed in the grounds for the purpose of furnishing the various buildings with light. There is also a large greenhouse. But, perhaps, most of all the mind of the man who leads the simple life is most impressed by the magnificence of the stable which lies in the inland side of Hale street, just opposite the Manor hall. It is said that people have gazed upon this building in frank and sincere admiration not unmixed with envy in the belief it was in truth the Frick mansion about which they had heard so much. Near the road is a smaller building which is Mr. Frick's pool and billiard house. Mr. Frick is evidently an exception to the rule laid down by James J. Hill in his speech at the opening of the Alaska-Yukon exposition, in which he said: "The life of those who do the work of the world, whether in the high places or the low, is usually a simple thing."

Parcels by Post to Japan.

On and after August 1 parcels up to eleven pounds in weight and of a value not greater than $80 may be sent through the mails from this country to Japan at the rate of 12 cents for one pound or for any fraction of a pound, prepaid, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

This is the announcement which has been made by the postoffice department, and it suggests the inquiry how soon the public may expect the application of a similarly liberal arrangement to domestic traffic. The actual situation is absurd, for while the postal department stands ready to transport a parcel one pound in weight to Yokohama or Tokyo for 12 cents, it charges 16 cents for carrying such a parcel across the river to Camden.

Nor is that all. The limit of weight for parcels consigned from one place in the United States to another is four pounds.

Any parcel that weighs an ounce over four pounds is unmailable, and is deposited at the postoffice it will not knowingly be forwarded to its destination.

The Proper Way.

It usually takes a woodworker's apprentice a year or more to learn that he doesn't know how.

A fledgling mechanic, who spoke sneeringly of a man whom he heard using several blows of the hammer to drive a shingle nail, was somewhat crestfallen when told that the nail would hold better when driven "home" by several light taps than when driven by one heavy one.

"Why?" asked he, in surprise.

"Because," said the other, "when you drive a nail home with a heavy blow it is apt to rebound a trifle, loosening the grip of the wood fibers on it. Drive it almost down, if you will, with as hard blows as you wish, but finish with several light blows."

Why They're Disappointed.

"Some men sit with folded hands waiting for their ships to come in," remarked the Observer of Events and Things, "who never made a single move toward even raising a sail."—Yonkers Statesman.

Enjoyable.

"Did you enjoy your ride in Green's naphtha launch?"

"I should say I did. The engine didn't break down once."—Detroit Free Press.

Ship Talk.

Steward—The second breakfast is being served now, sir.

Cabin Passenger—Good gracious! Why, I haven't had my first yet.—Punch.

A bachelor says matrimony is a sort of training school in which some women learn the art of drawing all-mony.

Silence is an argument that doesn't appeal to women.

Her Thoroughness.

There was once a little girl who was housewifely. Her name was Della and her mother was extremely proud of her. She could do all sorts of clever things—sewing and sweeping and cooking and everything. She always remembered to see that the other children had rubbers on when it was raining and didn't forget their umbrellas. She was such a capable child that one year, when they were getting ready to go to the country, she said to her mother: "Now, mother, you're so tired putting all the things in the house away and putting the summer clothes on the furniture, won't you let me pack the trunks?"

And her mother replied: "Della, if any other child had asked me to let her pack the trunks I should have said, 'Run along and play with your dolly,' but you are such a good and capable child that I believe I'll let you. Be sure to pack everything we need. You go upstairs and pack all the seven trunks and I'll go downtown and tell the expressman to call for them before lunch."

So Della trotted upstairs feeling very important, and she packed all those seven trunks with a neatness and precision which was truly beautiful. And just as she got the last one packed the expressman came in and carried them off.

They were to leave on the 4 o'clock train, and as the time approached the mother collected all the children and told them to get ready. But when they went to get ready they couldn't find their coats and hats anywhere. They hunted for them high and they hunted for them low, but they were nowhere to be found. Della had packed them in the trunks! They were all in a very distracted frame of mind.

"We might take our handkerchiefs and tie a knot in each corner for hats," suggested Della. But their mother didn't seem to think that was a good idea.

Then Della had another thought. "We'll have to borrow them from the neighbors," she said.

So the children scurried around the neighborhood and collected a various assortment of hats. They were not all entirely appropriate or becoming, but they got to the station in time to catch their train. The next day they sent back all the hats by express and unpacked their own from the trunks.

And when they got ready to come home from the country Della made all the children put on their hats and coats before she began to pack.—Chicago News.

A Wounded Soldier.

Over the Garden Wall.

If this game is played upon a tennis court the net makes a good wall, or if played in the parlor, a strip of muslin stretched across the folding doors or room, will answer. Then select two captains, who, in turn, select their sides, each side taking a position on either side of the wall. Each captain has a soft ball and at the count of one-two-three they toss the ball over the wall, at the same time calling the name of the opposite player who is expected to catch it. If in the excitement the wrong one catches the ball, he or she goes on the other side. The player who catches the ball, hastily passes it again to his captain and the former rule is repeated until one side outnumbers the other to great extent.

Rule for ei and ie.

There have been times, no doubt, when many of the boys and girls have been puzzled about the proper use of ei and ie in such words as receive and believe, which have the long e sound, nor need they feel ashamed to acknowledge it, for many "grown-ups" confess to the same weakness. There is a very simple rule, however, easily borne in mind, that will help you forever to overcome this doubt. The consonants e and a should be followed by ei, and all other consonants by ie, except that in two words—"siege" and "steve"—the s is followed by ie. Is not this an easy thing to remember?

Footscap Paper.

Doubtless many who have had occasion to write upon foolscap at school have wondered why this quality of paper is thus called. The watermark gives the explanation, and a watermark, as every one knows, is the maker's trade-mark, visible in the paper when a sheet is held up to the light. The watermark of foolscap is supposed to be a figure of Britannia supporting a cap of liberty on a pole. The resemblance of the cap of liberty to a dunce's cap led to the common use of the name, which the brand of paper now bears.

Peas and Pease.

Have you ever wondered when speaking or writing of the vegetable "pease" that sometimes it is spelled one way and at other times another? This is inconvenient, and perhaps, we think, unnecessary, but as it is a rule of our language we must conform until it is changed. A simple way is to remember that when you speak of a definite number of "peas" as "three peas" you spell it as we have there written it. When you wish to speak of the vegetable in bulk as by the bushel you spell it "pease."

THE ALHAMBRA REVISITED.

The American abroad is not so much a curiosity to the Europeans as he was a generation ago. Foreign nations have come to recognize the eager haste of American travelers, and they no longer wonder at the quickness of our pace. Occasionally a tourist himself sees the comical side of this way of taking a pleasure trip, and indulges in a little sarcasm at the expense of his companions on the road. It is in this vein of pleasantry that the author of "Two Aeronauts in Spain" reports the talk of two rivals for the record in speed.

The boasts of travelers have always amused me—above all, the superior air of the man who has crossed the Atlantic twenty times when patronizing the man who has crossed it only nineteen times.

Tourist Sprint thus addressed Tourist Trot: "Did you go over the whole of the Alhambra?"

"Yes," replied Tourist Trot, "and the Generalife, too. Did you go there?"

"Yes," replied Tourist Sprint, sharply, "of course I did; but I hope you didn't miss the view from the Torre de la Vela. It is puffedly grand. It is—"

"Miss it!" interrupted Tourist Trot, warmly. "Of course I didn't miss it. I knew all about that view before I came. Is it grand? Well, sure it is! But say—how many times did you go to the Alhambra, hey?"

Here Tourist Sprint's countenance fell. "Well," he weakly began, "you see, I—"

"I will bet a red apple," said Tourist Trot, triumphantly, "that you ain't been there but once."

Tourist Sprint admitted the shameful fact.

"I supposed as much," said Tourist Trot. "You made the mistake of your life—see? Now I hurried up my lunch, left the hotel at one o'clock, took in the Court of Lions and the Hall of the Abencerrages, and got to the train at two o'clock, all right, all right."

WAITED ON HIS WIFE.

Dramatic Incident in a Fashionable New York Restaurant.

That was an odd little yarn of Mrs. Burnham of Los Angeles, finding her long-lost son in the waiter who attended her table at the Hotel Astor the other day. But there was an odder one at the Knickerbocker not so long ago that didn't get into print, nor was it attended by any killing of the fatted calf, the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star says. One of the waiters at the Knickerbocker had attracted some attention by reason of his evident intelligence and education, as well as by his indisposition to speak of himself. He evidently had gained his knowledge of the waiter's game by sitting at the mahogany while another man waited on him. But that sort makes the best waiters, according to the maitre d'hotel. He ought to know. There are plenty of them.

Later on it developed that the waiter of this story had been a doctor in a town in Europe. He was a man of some standing and making a good income, but when his handsome wife ran away with another man he went to pieces. Eventually he gathered up his last few pence, got a steerage passage to America and started in to make a place for himself here. First, however, he must eat, and so he took this job at the Knickerbocker. One evening the head waiter assigned him to a table at which sat a well-dressed man and a beautiful woman. They were his runaway wife and the man she ran with. Neither paid any attention to the waiter who served them until the woman casually glanced at his face during the service of an entree. "Jules!" she shrieked.

The man at her side leaped to his feet. Diners at nearby tables glanced about in curiosity. The head waiter always on the alert, scurried over to quiet the trouble. The woman was pallid and trembling. Her escort was very evidently prepared for defense. Jules the waiter calmly kept on about his business. He removed the entree and served the next course. "Madam is agitated," he said, deferentially. "Perhaps—a little brandy—yes?"

That was all. He served the remainder of the dinner, although the couple made no pretense at eating. And then he offered the bill to the man and pounced the usual tip. To the head waiter, who learned his story, Jules was quite the philosopher. "Should we let yesterday's shadow cloud to-day's sun?" he asked.

It's as difficult for some people to let go as it is for others to catch on.

TRUMPET CALLS.

Ram's Horn Sounds a Warning Note to the Unredeemed.

Starving the preacher never strengthens the sermon. All paths to strength are known as avenues of struggle. He who is tender toward the weeds is cruel to the harvest.

Star-gazing is a poor way of finding the path to Heaven.

God never speaks through the man who cannot be silent.

Respectability always sits still lest its bones rattle audibly.

Shadows always hang longest over folks who growl at them.

He makes few mistakes who follows love, even though blindly.

The people who work religion seldom do any religious work.

The plety that runs out at the mouth only never rises in the heart.

If wishes were works how soon would the whole world be redeemed.

Folks who starch their necks usually let it run down into their hearts.

The people who close their eyes in meeting usually make up for it with their mouths.

It's hard work trying to raise heavenly fruits in a heart where the sun never enters.

Save where there has been much hard grinding, the gold is never on the surface of life.

When Christ is in your home you will not need a placard on the wall to advertise the fact.

The character goods we feel like advertising are often the ones for which we need to apologize.

MILKING AN INDIAN COW.

A striking feature of the morning routine of an Indian compound, writes Mary Anable Chamberlain in the Atlantic Monthly, is the method of extracting milk from the domestic cow. This animal is, as is well known, sacred in India, and the attitude of the Hindu toward her is one of extreme tenderness and consideration; a caste man is always her keeper.

Although ever so sacred, the cow makes no pretense to holiness in her conduct. As her keeper moves forward she pulls back, straining every fiber of the by no means invincible cord. He is a tallish man for a Hindu, erect in carriage, and in spite of the limitations of his costume, not undignified in bearing. She is a handsome beast, tall, stately, rawboned, impressive, apt to be white, sure to be humped.

A glance shows you that you are about to be treated for once to that unwonted spectacle of a male subdued by a female. The man's—and a caste man's, at that—demeanor is humble. The cow is defiant. He cosses her, coaxes her, indicates tactfully which way he would have her go. She shakes her head, tosses it scornfully, indicates unmistakably that she will go where she pleases. She makes a break for the bungalow, dragging the man after her by the rope, spies the munsahib "inspecting," is offended that she should wear skirts instead of a tunic, and charges, head down, in her direction, with a resultant of screams and confusion that brings every servant in the compound to the rescue. Then they all surround the cow, and with pushings and pullings and a full chorus of soothing sounds, bring her at last to the back veranda, where she is to be milked.

Here again the caste man's frame of mind is one of humble submission. He gives her time to collect herself and to forget the munsahib's skirts, and approaches her in a spirit of entire friendliness, of which he assures her by the dulcet tones of his voice. She finally consents to impart her milk, a thin, colorless liquid, which, in the most liberal estimate, does not exceed a pint or two.

A Happy Compromise.

"What a beautiful little baby he is!" exclaimed the neighbor who had called. "He isn't six months old yet, either," said the proud young mother, "and he weighs over twenty pounds."

"What have you named him?"

"Well," hesitated the mother, "Henry and I differed a little about that. He wanted to give him one name, and I wanted to give him another; but we finally compromised and agreed to call him John Wesley."

"I see; you named him after the great founder of Meth—"

"No, indeed," quickly interrupted the mother. "That name, as I said, is a compromise."

"But how?"

"The 'John' is for John Calvin, and the 'Wesley' is for John Wesley."

"Oh, I see."

Its Constituents.

To be exact is the pride of science, yet how difficult it is to be exact is proved over and over again. The Cleveland Leader tells a story of a classroom dialogue which goes to show the hopelessness of stating anything precisely in English.

"What is contained in sea-water?" inquired the chemistry teacher.

"Chloride of sodium, and er—and—"

"Well, what else?"

"Fish!"

The hardened cynic delights in sitting upon soft people.

The Helpful Bellboy.

For four consecutive nights the hotel man had watched his fair, timid guest fill her pitcher at the water cooler.

"Madam," he said on the fifth night, "if you would ring, this would be done for you."

"But where is my bell?" asked the lady.

"The bell is beside your bed," replied the proprietor.

"That the bell!" she exclaimed.

"Why, the boy told me that was the fire alarm, and that I wasn't to touch it on any account."—Success Magazine.

DON'T DESPAIR.

Read the Experience of a Minnesota Woman and Take Heart.

If your back aches and you feel sick, languid, weak and miserable day after day—don't worry. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands of women in the same condition.

Mrs. A. Heiman of Stillwater, Minn., says: "But for Doan's Kidney Pills I would not be living now. They cured me in 1899 and I've been well since. I used to have such pain in my back and once I fainted. The kidney secretions were much disordered and I was so far gone that I was thought to be at death's door. Since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me I feel as if I had been pulled back from the tomb."

The "Still Small Voice." The moral of this story may be that it is better to heed the warnings of the "still small voice" before it is driven to the use of the telephone.

A New York lawyer, gazing idly out of his window, saw a sight in an office across the street that made him rub his eyes and look again. Yes, there was no doubt about it. The pretty stenographer was sitting upon the gentleman's lap. The lawyer noticed the name that was lettered on the window and then searched in the telephone book. Still keeping his eye upon the scene across the street, he called the gentleman up. In a few moments he saw him start violently, and take down the receiver.

"Yes," said the lawyer through the telephone, "I should think you would start."

The victim whisked his arm from its former position and began to stammer something. "Yes," continued the lawyer severely. "I think you'd better take that arm away. And while you're about it, as long as there seem to be plenty of chairs in the room—"

The victim brushed the lady from his lap, rather roughly, it is to be feared. "Who—the devil is this, anyhow?" he managed to splutter.

"I," answered the lawyer in deep, impressive tones, "am your conscience!" And then he hung up.

Not as Bad as It Might Be. "Here's an Indiana man who wants a divorce because his wife takes all his money and goes out and buys ice cream."

"Well, he ought to be mighty thankful she doesn't make him turn the freezer."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SENSE ABOUT FOOD.

Facts About Food Worth Knowing.

It is a serious question sometimes to know just what to eat when a person's stomach is out of order and most foods cause trouble.

Grape-Nuts food can be taken at any time with the certainty that it will digest. Actual experience of people is valuable to anyone interested in foods.

A Terre Haute woman writes: "I had suffered with indigestion for about four years, ever since an attack of typhoid fever, and at times could eat nothing but the very lightest food, and then suffer such agony with my stomach I would wish I never had to eat anything."

"I was urged to try Grape-Nuts and since using it I do not have to starve myself any more, but I can eat it at any time and feel nourished and satisfied, dyspepsia is a thing of the past, and I am now strong and well."

"My husband also had an experience with Grape-Nuts. He was very weak and sickly in the spring. Could not attend to his work. He was put under the doctor's care but medicine did not seem to do him any good until he began to leave off ordinary food and use Grape-Nuts. It was positively surprising to see the change in him. He grew better right off, and naturally he has none but words of praise for Grape-Nuts."

"Our boy thinks he cannot eat a meal without Grape-Nuts, and he learns so fast at school that his teacher and other scholars comment on it. I am satisfied that it is because of the great nourishing elements in Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

It contains the phosphate of potash from wheat and barley which combines with albumen to make the gray matter to daily refill the brain and nerve centres.

It is a pity that people do not know what to feed their children. There are many mothers who give their youngsters almost any kind of food and when they become sick begin to pour the medicine down them. The real way is to stick to proper food and be healthy and get along without medicine and expense.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

THE PRESIDENT IS OUTSPOKEN

He Defends Tariff Law With All His Vigor.

THE BEST WE HAVE EVER HAD

This is the Opinion Boldly Expressed by President Taft in His Winona Speech—In the Same Connection He Asserted That the "Insurgents" Who Voted Against the Bill Had Abandoned the Republican Party—Taft Gives Remarkable Support to Tawney in Latter's Home.

Winona, Minn., Sept. 18.—President Taft here last night, in a state which is the hotbed of the "insurgent" movement within the Republican party, in the most important utterance he has made since his occupancy of the White House, defended the Payne tariff bill as the best tariff measure ever passed by a Republican congress and hence the best tariff bill the people have ever known.

The president boldly asserted that the insurgents who voted against the bill had abandoned the Republican party.

"Was it the duty of the men of congress who believed that the bill did not accomplish everything that it ought to accomplish, to vote against it?" asked the president. "I am here to justify those who answer this question in the negative. I am not here to defend those who voted for the Payne bill, but to support them."

This statement the crowd in the opera house received with a cheer which could be heard far down the street. It was shouted by the adherents of Representative James A. Tawney of this district, the chairman of the house committee on appropriations, who has been on the defense ever since the adjournment of congress because he did not vote with the other members of the delegation from Minnesota, both in the house and senate against the bill.

Mr. Tawney met the president at LaCrosse, Wis., and accompanied him to this city, his home town. It had been reported for some time that the president intended defending Mr. Tawney for his party regularity, but there were none to predict that the president would go so far as he did in characterizing the position taken by the insurgent senators and representatives. The president had met Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, one of the leaders of the insurgent movement, at Milwaukee during the forenoon, and had greeted him quite cordially.

"To make party government effective," said the president last night, "the members of that party should surrender their personal predilections of comparative less importance. I am not here to criticize those who felt so strongly and believed so intensely that it was their duty to vote against the tariff bill because it did not contain all they thought it should."

"It was a question for each man to settle for himself."

"In matters of this kind it is a question with the party representative whether he shall help maintain the party solidarity for accomplishing its chief purposes, or whether the departure from principle in the bill, as he regards it, is so extreme that he must in conscience abandon the party."

Further along the president gave a final word to the insurgents. "I am glad to see that those who voted against the bill still insist that they are Republicans and that they intend to keep up the fight for still lower tariff rates within the party. That is their right and in their view of things is their duty."

"All I have to say in respect to Mr. Tawney's action in voting for the bill and my action in signing it is that I believed that the interests of this country and the interests of the party required me to sacrifice the accomplishment of certain things in the revision of the tariff which I had hoped for, in order to maintain party solidarity, which I believed to be much more important than the reduction in rates in one or two schedules of the tariff."

President Taft's speech was a remarkable, plain-spoken defense of the Payne bill. The president went into the details of every schedule of the tariff bill, dwelling especially on the schedules which were the subject of the greatest fight and which developed more strongly the insurgent movement.

As to the woolen schedule, Mr. Taft declared without hesitation or equivocation that the rates of the Payne bill were too high. It was found early in the fight, however, he asserted, that the wool and woolen manufacturing interests in the Republican party were so strong that any attempt to change the Dingley rates would result in a defeat of the bill.

"I am sorry that this is so," said the president, "and I wish it could have been otherwise. It is one important defect in the bill and in the performance of the promises of the Republican platform."

Why Druggists Recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Mr. Frank C. Hanrahan, a prominent druggist of Portsmouth, Va., says: "For the past six years I have sold and recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is a great remedy and one of the best patent medicines on the market. I handle some others for the same purposes that pay me a larger profit, but this remedy is so sure to effect a cure, and my customer so certain to appreciate my recommending it to him, that I give it the preference." For sale by C. W. Milhous.

Twenty-Nine Lives Lost Off the Isle of Pines.

Mobile, Ala., Sept. 18.—Advises received here from the Isle of Pines, off the southern coast of Cuba, tell of the loss of the steamer Nicholas Castina with twenty-seven members of its crew and two passengers during the recent hurricane in those waters. Eighteen bodies have been recovered. The missing eleven are believed to have become the victims of sharks.

A Sprained Ankle.

As usually treated a sprained ankle will disable the injured person for a month or more, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment and observing the directions with each bottle faithfully, a cure may, in most cases, be effected in less than one week's time. This liniment is a most remarkable preparation; try it for a sprain or a bruise, or when laid up with chronic or muscular rheumatism, and you are certain to be delighted with the relief which it affords. For sale by C. W. Milhous.

Hundreds Killed by Explosion.

Tangier, Sept. 18.—Two hundred persons are reported killed and a like number injured by the explosion of a powder magazine in the market place at Tangier, in Tarragunt province. The magazine blew up when the market place was crowded. Nearly every house in Tangier was damaged by the explosion, and a number completely destroyed.

Best Treatment for a Burn.

If for no other reason, Chamberlain's Salve should be kept in every household on account of its great value in the treatment of burns. It allays the pain almost instantly, and unless the injury is a severe one, heals the wound without leaving a scar. This salve is also unequalled for chapped hands, sore nipples and diseases of the skin. Price, 25 cents. For sale by C. W. Milhous.

Victim of Overhead Bridge.

Washington, Ind., Sept. 18.—Fred Walters, a Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern fireman, living at Vallonia, was instantly killed at Montgomery. He was leaning from the gangway of an engine cab to get a breath of fresh air when his head struck the pillar of an overhead bridge.

Good for Biliousness.

"I took two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets last night, and I feel fifty per cent. better than I have for weeks," says J. J. Firestone, of Allegan, Mich. "They are certainly a fine article for biliousness." For sale by C. W. Milhous. Samples free.

George A. Astory Dead.

Indianapolis, Sept. 18.—George A. Astory, deputy great commander of the Knights of the Maccabees, who shot himself at his home in this city, is dead at the city hospital as the result of his injuries. Astory made the attempt to end his life because of poor health and domestic troubles.

Why?

From a small beginning the sale and use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has extended to all parts of the United States and to many foreign countries. Why? Because it has proved especially valuable for coughs and colds. For sale by C. W. Milhous.

Henry Horn Rearested.

Princeton, Ind., Sept. 18.—Henry Horn, pit boss in the Princeton coal mine, who on Aug. 12 shot and killed Louis Gaiser as the result of a fight following the latter's discharge, has been rearrested on a grand jury indictment charging second degree murder.

Health And Beauty Aid.

Cosmetics and lotions will not clear your complexion of pimples and blotches like Foley's Orino Laxative, for indigestion, stomach and liver trouble and habitual constipation. Cleanses the system and is pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

Wasn't a Good Loser.

New York, Sept. 18.—Frank E. Beck, a bookmaker widely known among racing men, committed suicide last night in his apartments by inhaling illuminating gas. According to the police recent heavy losses sustained by Beck are responsible for his act.

Many people delude themselves by saying "It will wear away," when they notice symptoms of kidney and bladder trouble. This is a mistake. Take Foley's Kidney Pills, and stop the drain on the vitality. They cure backache, rheumatism, kidney and bladder trouble, and make every trace of pain, weakness, and urinary trouble disappear. Sold by all druggists.

DR. COOK LETS IN FURTHER LIGHT

Additional Details of Row
With Peary.

HE CONCEALED VITAL FACT

When Dr. Cook Returned From the Pole and Found Peary's Man in Charge of His Depot He Told Only Harry Whitney of the Success of His Quest and Swore Him to Secrecy—Peary's Man Was Thrown Off, Hence Peary's Information That Cook Did Not Reach Pole.

On Board the Steamship Oscar II. at Sea, Sept. 18, via Marconi Wireless Telegraph to Cape Ray, N. F.—The following is the message Dr. Frederick A. Cook asked the Associated Press to give to his countrymen as he nears home on the steamer Oscar II., bound from Christiansand, Norway, to New York: "Tell the people of America to have the fullest confidence in my conquest of the pole. I have records of observations made by me which will prove my claim. I shall be glad again to set my foot on American soil." The Oscar II. is due to arrive at New York some time next Monday.

Dr. Cook discussed freely the assertions of Commander Peary that he (Cook) had never reached the north pole, and drew from him a detailed story of the causes that brought about dissensions between the two explorers. When he departed for the north, Dr. Cook said, he left a depot of provisions at Annotok, north of Etah, in charge of Rudolph Franke and several Eskimos. Franke had instructions to go south aboard a whaler and return later. This he did, but missed the returning vessel, owing to slight illness. He was then taken aboard Peary's ship, the Roosevelt, and proceeded north.

"Commander Peary found my supply depot at Annotok," Dr. Cook continued, "and the Eskimos in charge told him that I was dead, which they fully believed at the time. Peary placed two men in charge of the depot, Boatswain Murphy and another, Harry Whitney, the New Hampshire hunter, also remained there. Murphy had orders not to search for me, but was told he could send Eskimos northward the following spring from the relief depot."

"When I returned from the pole unexpectedly, Harry Whitney was the first to see me and to tell me what had occurred. Whitney was placed in possession of the facts concerning my journey to the pole on condition that he would not inform Commander Peary or his men of them. At the same time the Eskimos who had accompanied me north were told to maintain the strictest silence."

"When I went into the depot there was a dispute between myself and Murphy, who delivered to me written instructions he had received from Peary, although he himself could neither read nor write. The instructions showed that he was making a trading station of my depot, the contents of which had been used in trading for furs and skins."

Dr. Cook said he was intensely annoyed at this alleged wrongful use of his supplies and threatened to kick out Murphy and his companions. Finally, however, he consented to their remaining at the depot, as there was no other shelter in the vicinity for them. "On one occasion Murphy asked me abruptly, 'Have you been beyond 87?' Dr. Cook continued, 'but I was determined not to let Peary know my movements and replied evasively that I had been much farther north. From this statement has been concocted the declaration that I had said that I had not reached the pole.'"

Dr. Cook declared that neither Harry Whitney nor his (Cook's) records are on board the steamer Roosevelt and that therefore Peary's information concerning him emanated from Boatswain Murphy, who knew nothing of his movements. Dr. Cook said also that he had made arrangements for the two Eskimos who went with him to the pole and Knud Rasmussen, whom he met in Greenland, to go to New York and confirm the story of his discovery.

Dr. Cook is thoroughly enjoying his rest aboard ship after the strenuous days at Copenhagen.

Peary Leaves Battle Harbor.

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 18.—A dispatch received here from Commander Peary at Battle Harbor says that he will leave there today and will arrive in Sydney on Tuesday.

Worn Women

Women, worn and tired from overwork, need a tonic. That feeling of weakness or helplessness will not leave you of itself. You should take Wine of Cardui, that effectual remedy for the ailments and weaknesses of women. Thousands of women have tried Cardui and write enthusiastically of the great benefit it has been to them. Try it—don't experiment—use this reliable, oft-tried medicine.

TAKE CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Rena Hare, of Pierce, Fla., tried Cardui and afterward wrote: "I was a sufferer from all sorts of female trouble, had pain in my side and legs, could not sleep, had shortness of breath. I suffered for years, until my husband insisted on my trying Cardui. The first bottle gave me relief and now I am almost well. Try Cardui. 'Twill help you."

AUCTION SALE

OF THE
R. K. McClure Farm
IN JENNINGS CO., IND.

ON SEPTEMBER 23rd, 1909.

On the premises, the day above mentioned, at 12 o'clock Noon, we will offer this farm of 254 acres to the highest bidder. This farm is situated on the Muscatuck River 8 miles N. E. of North Vernon and 1½ miles N. W. of Butlerville, a station on the B. & O. R. R. It is a good farm in a neighborhood of good farms, with a 9-room 2-story frame residence, a large barn that will shelter from 80 to 100 head of stock, a large apple orchard and other fruit. Abundantly supplied with lasting water which should make it an ideal stock farm. It fronts on a Public Road about 1 mile which renders it susceptible of division into 3 tracts each with a front on a Public Road. It will be offered in three tracts and then as a whole and will be sold in that way which aggregates the most money. About 120 acres now in grass, about 60 acres ready for wheat. The school system in Indiana is of the best, which guarantees the facilities for education at a minimum cost.

Terms of sale ⅓ cash on delivery of a deed conveying a good and merchantable Title, the balance in equal payments on or before 1 and 2 years with six per cent interest per annum, payable annually. A cash deposit of $50 of each purchaser of a subdivision and $200 of the purchaser of the whole, to be refunded in case no sale is effected.

HANCOCK TAYLOR & CO.

WALKER BLDG. LOUISVILLE, KY.

N. B.—At the same time there will be sold a lot of personality, consisting of farm implements, horses, &c., and a lot of hay. Terms for this will be cash. HANCOCK TAYLOR & CO.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON, of Minnesota, underwent a surgical operation this week as a last resort to save his life, but the bulletins indicate that his chances for recovery are slight.

BEFORE long agents will be around taking orders for books entitled, "Dr. Cook's own Story," or "Commander Peary's Dash for the Pole." It is probable that some enterprising publishers are at work on such books even before the explorers get back home.

UP IN Johnson county the sheriff went out after a bunch of gamblers and caught twenty-four. Good catch for a sheriff. City policemen are not in the habit of doing better than that. It often happens that peace officers are the last ones to see or to suspect infractions of the law. But now and then a sheriff or a constable makes the experienced policeman ashamed.

A BLIND tiger operator was arrested, tried, convicted and fined $100 and sentenced thirty days in jail at Washington. Served him right. He knew better than to violate the law but did not expect to be caught. Every blind tiger operator and bootlegger should get the full penalty and that means a jail sentence. And every policeman who cannot scent a blind tiger should be promptly discharged.

Political Gossip.

Charles Leininger has announced as a democratic candidate for councilman at large. J. S. Mills announced his candidacy for a like place on the democratic ticket a few days ago.

Therepublicancandidates for council who have made formal announcement are John L. Vogel in the Second ward, William Ahlert and William R. Day in the Fifth ward. There is all of another week in which to make announcements and get on the primary ballot.

George B. Russell is the only democrat in the First ward so far to announce for councilman.

Air Ships Pass Through.

Two Kuabenshaw & Beackey air ships passed through Seymour this morning—but not in the air. They were on the southbound Pennsylvania train going to Nashville, Tenn., where a fair will soon begin. The two ships were of a racing type and were capable of making from twenty to forty miles per hour.

The rigging occupied an entire car and six men were with the outfit. The ships have just been on exhibition in Grand Rapids, Mich., where they made several successful flights. These air ships are well known, having made many successful flights in different parts of the country.

Act Quickly

If you have a sudden chill—if you have colic, cramp or diarrhea—don't wait a minute. Take a teaspoonful of Perry Davis' Painkiller in half a glass of hot water or milk. You'll be on the road to quick recovery. Have this tried remedy on hand for immediate use. Being prepared is half the battle. New size bottles 35c., also in 50c. size.

Mrs. W. F. Harris, wife of the new foreman of motive power here for the B. & O. S-W., was here from Washington this week. They are making arrangements to move here soon and will reside in the cottage owned by U. F. Lewis on W. Sixth street. Mr. and Mrs. Harris are clever people and we are glad to have them locate in our city.

PILES CURED AT HOME BY NEW ABSORPTION METHOD.

If you suffer from bleeding, itching, blind or protruding Piles, send me your address, and I will tell you how to cure yourself at home by the new absorption treatment; and will also send some of this home treatment free for trial, with references from your own locality if requested. Immediate relief and permanent cure assured. Send no money, but tell others of this offer. Write today to Mrs. M. Summers, Box P, Notre Dame, Ind.

County Asylums.

The Board of State Charities has just issued their quarterly bulletin for the quarter ending September 1909, in which they give the conditions of the various county jails and charitable institutions of the state. In this report they give a careful summary of their examinations and in some cases recommend several changes and improvements.

They report that the County Poor Asylum at Brownstown was visited in June, 1909, and found twenty-nine inmates, fifteen men and fourteen women. The bulletin states that it was in its "usual neat condition." The farm consists of one hundred seven acres, upon which are built ample buildings. The main building is lighted by electricity and is well ventilated. All the supplies are purchased on competitive bids. The jail was visited at the same time, which they found in a neat, clean and sanitary condition. They state that some complaints had been received about the food served to the prisoners, but investigation showed these complaints unfounded. The greatest need, it is said, is a hospital ward, for the benefit of sick prisoners.

Many Passengers.

The railroads have had unusually heavy travel today and nearly every train that came into the city was crowded. Some of the trains carried extra cars to accommodate the increased number of passengers. Nearly every train from the south carried a large number of passengers from Louisville where the Kentucky state fair has been in progress for several days. Several colleges begin their school year Monday and many of the passengers were students going to their respective schools. The railroads report, however, an increased traffic for the past month and expect a heavy fall business.

Good Wheat Year.

G. H. Anderson has returned from Decatur county where he has a large farm. He reports that he intends to put in about fifty acres of wheat, and thinks it will be profitable to the farmers to sow a large wheat acreage this year. He is of the opinion that the price will be as high next year as it is this season and the quality should be as good.

Plead Guilty.

Marshal Walker and Sheriff Wilson went to Brownstown Friday and returned a man who had "jumped" a board bill. He plead guilty and was fined $10 and cost, $24.50 in. He went to jail in default of payment.—Scottsburg Democrat.

Police Court.

Sherman Meranda was found guilty yesterday upon a charge of intoxication, and fined $1 and costs which were paid.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured completely upset the nerves if long continued. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for weakness and disease of the feminine organism.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good."

It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. Ask Your Neighbors. They probably know of some of its many cures. If you want a book that tells all about woman's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth-binding, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R.V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

Big Crowd for Columbus.

About 250 Seymour people, including the battalion of 70 uniformed men, the Seymour Band and others who went along, attended the "Woodmen of the Woods" picnic at Columbus Friday evening. The battalion was one of the leading features of the parade. They had battalion inspection on the grounds and the Foresters gave an excellent exhibition drill on the platform which won hearty applause. Later in the evening the M. W. A. team exemplified the degree work at Modern Woodman hall. The late cars returning were crowded, the Woodmen special arriving home this morning after one o'clock. More than 3,000 people witnessed the exhibition drill at Perry's Grove.

Wife Gets Divorce.

Judge Hacker, of Columbus, has granted a divorce to Viola Caldwell from her husband, Charles Caldwell, who figured in a lot of sensations at Elizabethtown last spring. She also gets what property he had in Bartholomew, and is given custody of their one child, to whose support Caldwell is to contribute five dollars a month. Caldwell was not present when the decree was granted.

TAKING CHANCES.

"Tis love that makes the world go round."

The poets blithely sing;
Alas for him who pawns his watch
To buy a diamond ring,
And after in a little flat
Dwells cooped up with his dear
And frames excuses 'gainst the time
The landlord doth appear.

"Tis love that makes the world go round."

In trust, a pleasing song,
But often, as the facts do prove,
It makes the world go wrong.
Sometimes the chap who got his choice
For freedom stoutly prays,
While he who sought her hand in vain
Lives happy all his days.

"Tis love that makes the world go round."

I would no cynic be;
Although we make some grave mistakes,
'Tis very plain to see
That love is still well worth the while
Of mortals here below
And life without some risks to run
Would be a trifle slow.

Young Mr. Hopper

I.

"Marry!" said old Tollevents Thompson, as he rocked lazily upon the veranda of his snug, but ill-shaped wooden cottage on the outskirts of Four Corners. "You've got me. What do you want to marry for? Ain't your home unlike everybody else's?"

"That's true enough, Dad," said Sars'prilla, the eldest of Tollevents' ten daughters. "If you'd been a thoughtful man, you'd have built it at once, 'stead of doing it by inches as we came along."

"How on airth"—Tollevents stopped whittling in almost speechless wrath, as he glared at his eldest girl—"how on airth was I to know you was all comin'?"

"Don't seem to me wuth while talkin' about that," volunteered Semanda, the next girl. "We're here; and it looks 's if we're here to stay, unless we git married."

"Wal, git married," said Tollevents, in desperation.

"How?" chorused seven more daughters, whilst dark-eyed, black-browed Selina, the tenth, sang merrily in the back kitchen.

During the course of his married happiness, every two or three years as the house filled up with additional babies—all of them girls—Tollevents had added more room by the simple expedient of building on a fresh shack to the others. Lest the end one should tumble down, he had built an earth-work against it. Then leaning the others up against the outside, and securely roofing them, he considered that the architectural effect thus produced was worthy of unlimited admiration. That no one else in Four Corners imitated this rambling building, he considered due to the habitual lack of enterprise shown by his neighbors.

"There's only one young man in Four Corners worth rovin' in," said Sars'prilla, turning her sweet blue eyes upon her sire. "Every night he comes hoppin' down the road like a skeared hen, gits a look at us, and ducks back agin."

"Selina!" called Tollevents. The merry voice of the girl in the kitchen suddenly ceased. She put out her gypsy face. (Selina was the only dark one of the ten; all the others were "Blue-eyed as is the morn"), and looked round composedly. "What's the fuss, Dad?"

"Bring me a bowl of water," said Tollevents, determinedly; "and some soft soap."

Selina affected to be thunderstruck. "Don't be rash at your time of life, Dad," Taint Sunday.

The innuendo that he never washed save on Sunday roused Tollevents to his full height. "And a biled shirt," he added sternly, disdaining to bandy words with his youngest offspring.

Selina hastily returned with a bowl of water and some soap, put the bowl on the top of a stump, and threw her father a towel as rough as Esau's hair. "You did order see Doc Higginson, Dad," she said, mirthfully. "What are you goin' to do?"

For a few minutes Tollevents disdained to answer Selina. Sars'prilla slid into his chair and rocked herself to and fro, swaying her lissome body to an old camp-meeting tune. The eight other girls—Selina had retired to the kitchen again—sat in a row on the bench and giggled. They were all blue-eyed, all fair-haired, all beautiful, and all exactly alike, with the exception that Sars'prilla was a little stouter than her sisters.

Decorum prescribed the sudden retirement of Tollevents into that part of the shack which was by courtesy called a bedroom (when the weather was fine, he usually had a shakedown on the veranda) in order that he might don his Sunday clothes. Meantime the girls waited, wondered and giggled every few moments at this sudden accession of energy on the part of their sire.

"Looks though he is a deacon 'sif we wanted to git religion agin," audaciously suggested Semanda.

"Looks to me 'sif you'll git some 'ting you ain't bargainin' for," said Tollevents grimly, thrusting his head under the corner. "Thar ain't no ons on this yer biled rag."

Selina, ever prompt, was on the spot. "Thar ain't no ons on this yer biled rag," she said, with a shrug. "Thar ain't no ons on this yer biled rag."

since Christmas, dad, else I'd have put 'em on before. That long prayer of yours in meetin' made all your buttons fly. Old Deacon Harbro bust only one of his."

Cheered by Selina's tribute to his gifts as an exhorter, Tollevents tied a black handkerchief loosely round his collar and took down his gun, which he loaded with unusual care, the girls watching him apprehensively while he put in an extra allowance of buckshot Selina remonstrated with him.

"Thar's only one young man wuth marryin' in Four Corners just now, dad. Don't waste him."

"This yer alleged marryin' man," said Tollevents, carefully resting the gun against the veranda, "comes down this yer road 'sif it belonged to him. It b'longs to me; and I'm goin' to drive the truth into him."

"Not wuth buckshot," implored Selina, turning a little pale.

Tollevents rested his gun in a fork of the lilacs which grew greenly around the veranda, brought out his Bible, turned to his favorite chapter wherein many Amalekites were slaughtered, and read it with gusto. "Does seem to me," he mused, keeping one eye on the road—"Does seem to me 'sif thar's more real wholesomeness in gittin' a man under the fifth rib 'stead of fillin' him up wuth buckshot; but we can't be choosers of what is set afore us. We must do the work in the way as somes handiest. I reckon young Hopper 'll be along in an hour. If he ain't, I'll go and fetch him."

II.

Selina, noting that her sisters, obeying a hint from Tollevents, were all attired in their Sunday best, laughing mirthfully. "Dad 'll scare the life out of him," she said, gaily. "That Hopper can't say boo to a goose."

She slipped round the back of the shanty, her dark face framed in a becoming sunbonnet, dived down to Ot-tawa shore, then up again through the pines, some quarter of a mile from her father's house.

"WHAT'S THE FUSS, DAD?"

Presently, young Mr. Hopper, picturesque yet shy, also blue-eyed, and with a fierce moustache, which belied his youth, sauntered irresolutely down the road. As he did so, he was aware of Selina coming towards him, the one person in the world whom he had hoped to see. "Snakes!" he murmured to himself. "My heart's pumpin'! I can't run now."

Selina affected to pass him, then stopped suddenly. "Goin' down the road?" she asked; and took him with veiled eyelids.

"I've bin' down this yer blamed old road all the winter, and all the spring, and all the summer," declared Mr. Hopper, fiercely; "an' thar's nine of you allers sittin' on the veranda and you never show up."

"Thinkin' of turnin' Mormon, Mr. Hopper? Ain't nine of us enuff for you?"

"N-no," declared Mr. Hopper, irresolutely. "Not by no manner of means. Me bein' a shy sort of man, I git lost in the crowd. It—it makes my head swim," he added, feebly.

"Then if you tumble in the river you won't drown. But did I order be gettin' on?"

"What's your hurry?" implored Mr. Hopper, then blushed crimson.

There was a twitch of Selina's pretty lips as she looked down the road. "Nothin'! Nothin'! Only, you don't know what you're lettin' yourself in for if you go down that road to-night."

"Nothin' can be worse'n goin' on like this," declared the pessimistic Mr. Hopper. "Old man on the warpath? Thinks he owns this road, don't he?"

Selina nodded. "He's got his best clothes on, the old gun's filled up to the brim wuth—buckshot!"

"I'd like to fill him up to the brim wuth whisky, then turn him loose in meetin'," said Mr. Hopper, vindictively. "What's he want to take a hand in this yer game for?"

"He thinks it's time some of us got settled. If you go down there you'll find out what he means. Better go home."

"See here," Mr. Hopper looked into the charming face until she blushed most becomingly. "See here, I'm the man who's doin' the marryin', ain't I?"

"Ye-es."

"Then blamed if I don't go and tell him so."

"But you've no gun," declared Selina in terror. "He'll make you marry Sars'prilla 'cause she's the oldest."

"N," said Mr. Hopper, with a dark meaning. "If I git out of this alive I'm going to marry the gal I darn please. If—if she'll have me."

lag fiercely the while, he took her in his arms, kissed her fervently and marched valiantly down the road, leaving Selina gazing after him.

"And they call him shy!" she mused. "Shy! With a moustache like that!" Her cheeks flamed as she dived into the mysterious recesses of the pines, which stood in serried ranks upon the river shore.

III.

"You, Hopper! Stop!" cried Tollevents, as young Mr. Hopper came rapidly abreast of the house.

Mr. Hopper caught the glint of a gun barrel. The sun set fair behind the gloomy hills. Ranged in a row on the veranda were nine fair girls. At the end of the veranda stood Tollevents, tall, gaunt, thin, clad in his Sunday best, leaning carelessly on the shot gun.

"Wishful to speak to me?" jauntily inquired young Mr. Hopper. "You ain't turned road agent, Deacon?"

The Deacon cleared his throat. "It's a sin and disgrace you ain't married. You're the oldest young man in Four Corners, and all the others is waitin' for you to give 'em a lead. Yet you come sailin' along this yer road night arter night, and shuffles by like a ground-hog, without raisin' your eyes to all these yer—these yer fair young flowers," he added, with a touch of parental poetry. "Which one is it?"

"Ain't you takin' it too much for settled?" asked young Mr. Hopper.

"I'm a man of few words," Tollevents raised his gun carelessly to the level. "Here's nine gals all of a row. Which is it?"

Mr. Hopper bowed gracefully to the young ladies on the veranda. "Any one of 'em? I ain't worthy of it, Deacon."

"Any one of 'em. You ain't worthy, but it's the best I can do for 'em," said the Deacon, firmly.

"Which?"

They were girls whose beauty would have gladdened the hearts of an anchorite.

Young Mr. Hopper surveyed them carefully, then turned to Tollevents. "See here," he said, severely. "Ain't you 'shamed of yourself, Deacon, to go puttin' such a slight on 'em? If I married one, what will the eight others do?"

"You leave that to me. Which?" ominously repeated the deacon.

"Tain't no business of yours." Young Mr. Hopper walked down the veranda, feeling that Tollevents' gun covered his manly back. "Can't I go home and think it over?" he asked, when he had come to the end of the row.

"You can go home, and take a load of buckshot with you, if that 'll help you to think," said Tollevents.

Young Mr. Hopper came back to the top of the row, then shook his head. "They're all too much alike. I'd git mixed up and never know 't'other from which. Tain't fair, Deacon."

"I don't want to shoot you in a hurry," said the Deacon. "No one can't say I ain't a just, reasonable, tender-hearted, God-fearing, help-my-neighbor kind of man. Tain't my fault they're all alike; but you've got to take one of 'em."

Young Mr. Hopper shook his head. "Can't be done. I don't mind marryin', but I can't get mixed up like this. It's wuss'n bigamy."

Tollevents took deliberate aim at him. "I'm sorry to have to do it," he said, gently, "and your mother, bein' a widder, 'll curse me for removing my neighbor's landmark, so to speak; but I've got to make an example of you."

There was a wild shriek as Selina threw herself between them. "Guess you'll have to hit me first," she cried, choking with laughter and tears. "You—you can't go wastin' young men like this, Dad."

"Stop a minute," said Mr. Hopper, with affected deliberation. "How dare you try such a put-up job on me?"

"I—I don't understand," faltered Tollevents, confused by this sudden attack.

"Why you might ha' known that a shy man like me couldn't make up his mind wuth nine gals all 'zackly alike. This settles it. Here's a dark one. I'll take her."

There was a chorus of "Oh!" from the veranda. Tollevents looked irresolute, for Selina was his favorite. "It's beginnin' at the wrong end," he said, doubtfully.

"Don't you worry about that. Anyway, it's a beginnin'," urged young Mr. Hopper. "That's all you've got to do, 'cept put down that gun. It might go off; and the Coroner's a friend o' mine. He'd say things. Now you can take off your store clothes, and make yourself comfortable, father-in-law that is to be."

Tollevents put down the gun, and young Mr. Hopper, linking Selina's arm in his, strolled along with her to the pines. A bend in the road hid them from the house.

Selina could feel him trembling as they wandered along in the odorous dusk.

"You—you do mean it, Selina?" he quavered. "Cause if you don't, he can shoot all he wants to; and I'll be glad of it. I ain't afraid of him; but I am of you."

Selina hesitated. Young Mr. Hopper turned back. "Stop," she called after him in alarm.

"Well?" queried Mr. Hopper. "I knew how it 'ud be. Let him fill me up wuth—"

"Won't I do instead?" queried Selina.

"What! With buckshot?"

JUGGLING THE ALPHABET.

Many Have Tried to Form a Sentence with Only Its 26 Letters.

Many attempts have been made by ingenious writers to put the whole alphabet in a single sentence without duplication of letters, according to a writer in the Housekeeper.

Prof. De Morgan, the famous mathematician, tried to juggle the alphabet into one sentence, each letter being used but once. After many fruitless attempts he decided to compromise exactness by using i for j and further by regarding u and v as the same letter. Then his final accomplishment read as follows:

"I quartz pyx, who fling muck beds." At first he did not appreciate the full significance of his accomplishment. "At least," he says, "I happened to be reading a religious writer, who threw aspersions on his opponents thick and threefold. 'Heyday!' came into my head, 'this fellow flings muck beds. He must be a 'quartz pyx.'"

"Then I remembered that a pyx is a sacred vessel and quartz is a hard stone, as hard as the heart of a religious foe curser. So that the line is the motto of a ferocious sectarian, who turns his religious vessels into muck holders for the benefit of those who will not see what he sees."

The professor published his sentence and called upon others to outdo him if they could. The following are samples of the efforts which resulted:

"Quiz, my whigs, export fund back. "Dumpy quiz, whirl back fogs next. "Get nymph; quiz sad brows; fix luck."

The professor awarded the palm of the competition to this last sentence. "It is good advice," he explains, "to a young man, very well expressed under the circumstances. In more sober English it would be 'Marry, be cheerful, watch your business.'"

Even when the duplication of letters is permitted the crowding of the entire alphabet into a single coherent sentence is not an easy task, and such examples as "John T. Brady gave me a black walnut box of quite small size," which is perhaps the best known, are neither numerous nor important.

There is one verse in the Bible which contains all the letters of the alphabet except j; this is the twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra, and as the verse contains some forty words the collocation is only noteworthy because it occurred without previous design.

None of the examples here given is perhaps as good as that recently quoted in the Sun: "Pack my box with five dozen liquor jugs." This contains the entire alphabet, is a perfectly coherent sentence and has only thirty-two letters in comparison with forty-seven letters in the "John T. Brady" example. So it would seem to hold the palm.

REDI'S EXPERIMENT.

Out of It Grew the Great Fabric of the Germ Theory.

It was a fixed belief of the ancients that many living creatures could come into existence in a spontaneous fashion, to which allusion has often been made. The true beginning of the germ theory arose out of a ludicrously simple observation made by Redi, a Florentine physician, about the middle of the seventeenth century. He debated with his conferees in Florence the question of the origin of the maggots appearing in decomposing meat.

The old view held, of course, that the maggots were bred within dead and putrefying substances. Redi, taking a piece of meat, covered the mouth of the jar in which it was contained with a piece of fine gauze. He beheld the flesh flies, attracted by the smell of the decaying meat, coming to deposit their eggs, after the manner of their kind, in the decomposing substance. The gauze, however, kept them from effecting this natural object, with the result that the eggs were laid on the surface of the gauze and the maggots there hatched out, while the decay of the meat went on uninterruptedly without a single maggot appearing in its substance.

On this childish simple experiment the great fabric of the germ theory of to-day was founded, for if the law of universal parentage applied to the case of maggots and meat it was clear, argued Redi, that it must apply universally. Subsequent experimentation proved the words to be true, and so to-day, when our attention is focused upon germs or microbes so minute that we might accommodate many hundreds of thousands of them on the surface of a postage stamp, we again come face to face with Redi's first principle that each germ could only have sprung from a preceding and parental organism.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Breaking It Gently.

Of Sabbath-breaking north of the Tweed, says a writer in the London Chronicle, there is the story of the Scot and his wheelbarrow, which has been fathered upon Sir Archibald Geikie. Donald was hammering away at the bottom of his barrow when his wife came to the door.

"Mon," she said, "you're making much clatter. What will the neebours say?"

"Never mind the neebours," said the busy one. "I maun get ma barra mendit."

"Oh, but Donald, it's vera wrang to wurk on Sabbath!" expostulated the good wife. "Ye ought to use screws."

Good Investment.

To men of moderate means as well as to men of large means, the Cooperative Building and Loan Association offers another of its splendid investment opportunities. Its next series of stock, Series T, will open on Monday Oct. 4th, and already many persons are inquiring of the Secretary, Thos. J. Clark about the stock. The steady growth of the business of this Association during the years of its history is the best evidence that it serves well the people in this community, and that it meets a real need. It offers to the person who can save twenty-five cents per week, or any multiple of this amount each week, the opportunity to place the money in these small weekly sums where the savings begin to draw interest from the very start. A person may lay away the same amount privately each week, if he would, but would not have the advantage of the interest which accumulates through the Cooperative. The Association takes the accumulated savings and loans them at once on first mortgage on real estate, the safest sort of investment, and then each quarter distributes the earnings among the stockholders, giving to each shareholder the same advantage that a large capitalist has, in proportion to the amount of his stock. If you want a good, safe, profitable investment, see the secretary, Thos. J. Clark, Opera House Block, at once and take some stock in Series T.

Republican Primary.

Notice is hereby given to the Republicans of the city of Seymour, Indiana, that on the 28th day of September, 1909, the Republican party will hold a primary election in said city of Seymour, for the purpose of nominating candidates for city offices. EL ROGHI'S MISERY ENDED BY SULTAN Conquered Rebel Finds No Mercy In Morocco.

Fez, Sept. 18.—Inside the palace and in the presence of the imperial harem, El Roghi, the rebellious subject of the sultan of Morocco, who recently was brought here a prisoner in an iron cage, was put to death Sunday. The death of the rebel appears to have been the infuriated sultan's reply to the protest of the French consul against the torture inflicted by the sultan's soldiers on rebellious Moors who had been brought captives to Fez, though as a result of a protest the followers of El Roghi were released. The sultan also gave orders at the time that El Roghi, who was ill, be no longer exposed to the public view in his iron cage.

TRADE REVIVING

Bradstreet's Weekly Review Distinctly Encouraging in Tone.

New York, Sept. 18.—"A distinctly stronger undertone is displayed in this week's telegraphed trade reports," says Bradstreet's weekly review of trade today. "Improvements in wholesale and jobbing demand, enlargement of industrial output and perceptible gains in collections are the central facts this week. Satisfactory progress, too, appears to be making in agricultural matters, with the exception of cotton. The movement of crops and general merchandise is enlarging, and this week finds widely noted the reports that manufacturers of many lines are behind on deliveries, and that the idle car list is still decreasing largely."

BETWEEN LIFE AND DEATH

Governor Johnson Passing Through Crisis of Illness Today.

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 18.—With his wife at his bedside and his physicians in constant attendance, Governor Johnson is swaying between life and death at St. Mary's hospital. In the last statement given out by Dr. Charles Mayo the surgeon stated that if the governor survives today he will have an even chance for his life.

Governor Johnson showed a decided change for the worse last evening, and for a while his friends despaired of his recovery, but the message from Dr. Mayo has given them new hope.

MOTHER KILLED BABY THEN HANGED HERSELF

Mrs. Polley Thought to Have Been Victim of Worry.

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 18.—The decomposed body of Mrs. Joseph W. Polley of Elener was found suspended by the neck to the limb of a tree at the edge of a cornfield, a mile and a half from this city. At the foot of the mother lay the body of her baby. Both had been dead some time, and the police say the woman killed her infant and then hanged herself.

Mrs. Polley, whose mind has been affected, with her child left home mysteriously Sept. 8, and the police instituted a search a week ago. No trace of the missing woman and her baby was found until a farmer made the gruesome discovery.

Joseph Polley, the husband of the woman, has been away from home some time, and was last heard from in a letter posted at Baker City, Ore., Sept. 1.

It is believed that Mrs. Polley became demented from worry over a land claim that her husband staked out in the northwest. Evidence is conclusive that Mrs. Polley strangled her baby and then ended her life.

TREAT TO RETIRE

United States Treasurer Will Return to Private Life.

Washington, September 18.—United States Treasurer Charles H. Treat has resigned from that office, to take effect in October. No successor has yet been chosen, so far as known. Large and growing business interests and the death of some of his associates who have directed his private business affairs, Mr. Treat said, have made it imperative that he should give these matters his immediate and exclusive attention.

Police Raid Gravesend Track.

New York, Sept. 18.—Sixteen men, many of them well-known members of the Metropolitan Turf association, were arrested at the Gravesend race-track while the races were in progress and arraigned before the Kings county court, charged with "aiding and abetting in the employment of book-makers." They all pleaded not guilty, being released under $1,000 bail each for trial on Sept. 27.

The Colonel Bags a Tusker.

Nairobi, British East Africa, Sept. 18.—News has been received here that Theodore Roosevelt has killed a bull elephant with good tusks. Kermit Roosevelt has been hunting independently at Guaso Myiro, and has been very successful, bagging five lions and three buffaloes. He has now started out elephant hunting.

Neighbors Patch Up Quarrel.

LaPaz, Sept. 18.—Minister of Foreign Affairs Bustamente and the Peruvian minister to Bolivia have signed a protocol for the settlement of the differences that long have existed between Peru and Bolivia over the boundary question.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SEPTEMBER 19, 1909

REVIEW LESSON. Third Quarter.

GOLDEN TEXT:—So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed.

[Copyright, 1899, by American Press Association.]

LESSON I.—Paul's second missionary journey—Antioch to Philippi—Acts xvi, 6-15. Golden Text, Acts xvi, 9. "Come over into Macedonia and help us." The lessons of this quarter cover Paul's second and third missionary tours and illustrate the things that even to this day may befall the Spirit-filled and Spirit-sent servants of the Lord. Souls will be saved, companies of believers gathered, but there must be faithful and persistent seed sowing, patient waiting and absolute surrender to the Spirit's control and guidance.

LESSON II.—The Philippian Jailor, Acts xvi, 25-40. Golden Text, Acts xvi, 31. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved and thy house." A most unlikely convert, at a most unlikely time, in a most unlikely place, but thus God works, not as we would think or expect, but as He sees best, asking us to be willing to suffer with and for Him, who bore so much for us, and praise Him through it all, if only souls may be saved by seeing His power and believing in Him.

LESSON III.—Paul at Thessalonica and Berea, Acts xvii, 1-15. Golden Text, Ps. cxix, 11. "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against Thee." Everywhere God works by His Spirit, through His word as Jesus is preached. The Spirit uses only His word as the means by which He accomplishes the will of God. The written word tells of the living word, and by the word God is revealed, even as the Lord revealed Himself to Samuel by the word of the Lord (I Sam. iii, 21).

LESSON IV.—Paul at Athens, Acts xvii, 22-34. Golden Text, John iv, 24. "God is a Spirit, and they that worship Him must worship Him in Spirit and in Truth." The great adversary is content to let men worship any kind of a god and as many gods as they please if he can only keep them from knowing the one true God, the only Creator, Redeemer and Judge of all mankind.

LESSON V.—Close of Paul's second missionary journey, Acts xviii, 1-22. Golden Text, John xvi, 33. "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." God always has a "Be not afraid" for every one who is fearful, whether it be Abram or Isalah or John or Paul or you, dear reader, whoever you are, if only you are a child of God by faith in Christ Jesus.

LESSON VI.—Paul's instructions to the Thessalonians, I Thess. v, 12-24. Golden Text, I Thess. v, 15. "See that none render evil for evil unto any man, but ever follow that which is good. In this probable first letter which he wrote we have a fair sample of all His instructions. Saved by the grace of God through the gospel of His Son, to serve Him and to wait for His Son from heaven, walking worthy of God while we wait for His kingdom.

LESSON VII.—Paul at Ephesus on his third missionary journey, Acts, xix, 8-20. Golden Text, Acts xix, 17. "The name of the Lord Jesus was magnified." This is the story of Paul's three years at Ephesus when through Him all who dwell in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, and to make manifest the pre-eminence of that name over the evil one and all evil spirits God caused special miracles to be wrought through Paul.

LESSON VIII.—The riot at Ephesus, Acts xix, 23-30. Golden Text, I Cor. xii, 9. "He said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee, for my strength is made perfect in weakness." When the name of the Lord Jesus is magnified and the word of God grows and prevails the adversary will surely show his wrath; hence this riot in the name of Diana of the Ephesians whom all Asia and the world worshiped.

LESSON IX.—Paul on Christian love, I Cor. xiii, 1-13. Golden Text, I Cor. xiii, 13. "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three, but the greatest of these is love." Consider how much that is outwardly good and praised by men may be in the sight of God as nothing. "That which is highly esteemed among men is abomination in the sight of God" (Luke xvi, 15). The love of God, which is the greatest thing we ever heard of, must be known and believed and the Son of God received before any service can be acceptable to Him.

LESSON X.—Paul's farewell to the Ephesians, Acts xx 2-38. Golden Text, Phil. iv, 13. "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me." Having been to Europe and being now on his way to Jerusalem, he utters these farewell words. He magnified the gospel of the grace of God, the word of God, and on man's part faith and repentance.

LESSON XI.—Close of Paul's third missionary journey, Acts xxi, 1-17. Golden Text, Acts xxi, 14. "The will of the Lord be done." Services at Tyre, Ptolemais and Caesarea mark the close of this third great journey in the name of the Lord Jesus, but the special thing to be noted seems to be his being forbidden by the Holy Ghost to go to Jerusalem (21, 24), and yet his determination to go, thinking, no doubt, that it was simply the kindness of the brethren and their desire that he should not suffer unnecessarily.
